SALVAGED-BEAM TABLES, CHAIRS

New York furniture designer Andrew Moe uses lumber cut from salvaged hardwood beams to make his collection of tables, chairs and desks, whose simple lines and finish are a blend of Scandinavian and Japanese design. This slender desk ($1,375) is part of his Oslo Collection. It's made from salvaged ash. Three percent of profits go to the Alliance for International Reforestation, a non-profit that reforests areas in Guatemala and Nicaragua.
